

Bright hues add flair to neutrals-dominated line

Typical features

- Coat: Single-breasted styles are the most common. Two or three buttons are utilized for the closure, and the same number is added as decoration on the cuffs. There are two flap or welt waist, one welt chest and two or three inner pockets. In addition, suppliers often adopt thin shoulder pads, notch lapels, one back vent, fusible interlining and full lining.
- Trousers: Single-pleated versions dominate output. These come with zipper and button closures, cuffed bottoms, and two slant side and welt rear pockets. Pants with nonslip waistbands, lining and reinforced leg openings are also available.
- Shell: Low-end suits utilize pure polyester or 65:35 polyester-rayon. The more expensive models come in wool blends such as 55:45 polyester-wool and 40:30:30 polyester-wool-rayon. The typical materials employed in high-end designs are 100 percent wool, wool-cashmere and wool-silk fabrics.
- Vest: Four- and five-button main closures are popular. Models have two waist pockets, although one on the chest is an option. All may be welt or slit types.
- Lining: Polyester and rayon are popular options. The least expensive suits adopt pure polyester, while 65:35 polyester-rayon and 100 percent rayon are alternatives in midrange sets.
- Surface treatment: Most suits from China come in a solid color or striped pattern. Some have a satiny finish.

Top trends

- Unorthodox colors: Vivid hues such as royal blue and mauve are gaining ground. In contrast, white and other light colors are seen as lacking in character. Neutrals, however, remain dominant as black, gray and camel stay in the lead.
- Design details: The latest coats appear more streamlined with rounder and smoother fly hems. Three-button closures in single-breasted styles are the best-sellers.
- Easy-to-care suits: Such models are usually upscale. They are machine-washable, water-rinsable and wrinkle-resistant. Imported wool fibers are utilized, producing specially treated fabrics that withstand shrinkage and stains.
- Price increase: Coming from 10 to 30 percent markups in the past year, suppliers expect quotes to climb 10 to 20 percent further in the months ahead. These adjustments are due to rising raw material and labor costs.
- Export sales growth: Despite the price increases, companies predict order volume will remain the same in the next half-year. Total export value, however, will be larger because of the higher quotes.
